

THEY'RE NOT BOSSY, THEY'RE THE BOSS!

MORE ON THIS STORY:
WWW.DELANO.LU/
EWP2015

They have a myriad of ideas: import windows, advise on fashion, help decorate apartments. Luxembourg's businesswomen-to-be have just finished the second edition of the "Entrepreneurial Women Project", organised by the Luxembourg-Poland Business Club and aimed at introducing future entrepreneurs to legal and tax frameworks, funding, HR and marketing--all crucial when setting up a company.

There were 27 participants in this edition of the course. "I came here with no concrete idea of what I would like to do," said Malgorzata Wroblewska, now working in telecommunications. "Over the span of six Saturday meetings I started to understand my strengths, brainstorm with the fellow participants and I have understood that I could sell jewellery, which now I only design and create for myself."

"I have met great women who would also like to do something on their own, but simply didn't know where to start," commented Kinga Koluszek, an artist who plans to organise workshops. "It is very encouraging." <

www.lpbc.lu

GETTING STARTED

- A. Nancy Wendt and Anastasiya Garova during a training course held in November on the University of Luxembourg's Limpertsberg campus. The headline of this article was inspired by Beyoncé and the "Ban Bossy" campaign.
- B. Mandy Patrick
- C. Lynsey Baxter
- D. Kasia Strejmer and Gosia Wroblewska
- E. Ewelina Tabone and Kinga Schubert
- F. Sylwia Ponienska and Kinga Koluszek
- G. Heidi Kurki, Fatoumata Kaba, Kasia Krzyzanowski and Alina Belousova
- H. Stephanie Scerri and Elizabeth Cardona

